Proteus Completes Unmanned Missions Testing

Proteus, Huntington Ingalls Industries' dual-mode undersea vehicle, successfully completed autonomous contested battlespace missions during the 2017 Advanced Naval Technology Exercise (ANTX) at the Naval Surface Warfare Center (Panama City Division) on Aug. 16.

During ANTX, the Naval Surface Warfare Center, in cooperation with HII, Battelle, Northrop Grumman and Riptide Autonomous Solutions, conducted aerial, surface and underwater vehicle advance mission capability demonstrations through relevant operational scenarios while communicating real-time...

Proteus, developed by HII's Technical Solutions division (Undersea Solutions Group) and Battelle, entered a contested battlespace to deliver and launch three smaller unmanned undersea vehicles (UUVs) with unique roles in the overall mission objective. When launched, Riptide's micro-UUVs and Northrop Grumman's REMUS UUV successfully executed unique mission plans according to their onboard sensors and payloads to investigate and prepare the contested battlespace.

Shipbuilders Steering the Way

Chip Miller (O67) and Eric Chacon (O48) received Level One On-the-Spot Ethics Awards in July.

Miller was honored for securing two Aramark money bags he found on top of a vending machine, locating the vendor and returning the bags.

Chacon was honored for identifying a crane in the Modular Outfitting Facility that had been returned to service without undergoing a required audit. He notified his supervisor, and a work stoppage was put into place.

Ray Bagley, vice president of Trades Operations, met with Chacon and Miller to present the awards and thank them for their actions.

Having App Issues? Ensure Your System is Up-to-Date

Some users who installed Google's Android 7 Nougat system update may experience problems with certain apps, including the Google Play Store and/or the NNS to Go app. Users who have upgraded to Nougat and are experiencing performance issues with specific apps, should delete and reinstall those apps on their mobile device. If the Google Play Store consistently crashes, users should restart their device. If restarting the device does not work, then users may need to clear their storage cache. This can easily be done by tapping on "Settings," then tapping, "Storage," then "Cached Data."

ODU Course Explores Digital Shipbuilding

Shipbuilders interested in learning more about digital shipbuilding can enroll in a distance learning course at Old Dominion University this fall. Marine Engineering II: Introduction to Digital Shipbuilding is open to undergraduate, graduate and non-degree seeking students.

"The course is really a primer to encourage people to think using the digital 3-D model instead of the traditional 2-D drawing," said Brent Woodhouse (X57), one of several Newport News Shipbuilding employees who volunteered to help teach the class. "You're going to learn about digital concepts and what we're trying to do at the shipyard, but there's a lot we still have to figure out. We invite everyone to come join us, embrace these challenges and help us solve them."

The class will focus on model-based learning and creating a "digital thread" of information. Students will practice what they learn on shipbuilding concepts using commercial software that is widely used across automotive, aerospace and marine industries.

Classes will be held on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 4:45 until 6 p.m. at ODU's Tri-Cities Center, located just off Interstate 664 and Highway 164 near the borders of Suffolk, Portsmouth and Chesapeake. Students can physically attend class, or log in and watch it online.

A version of the course was also taught last spring. Woodhouse said there was a "cool dynamic" of younger college students and those working in industry during the session.

"The 3-D modeling was like second nature to the younger people in the class. They were whizzing through the software. I had some older guys who struggled with the computer-aided design (CAD) piece, but they were able to better apply the digital products to shipbuilding processes. It was a good mix. Both generations were learning from each other," he said.

For questions about the course or registration, contact Woodhouse at 688-7990.

Qualified employees can use the Education Assistance Program for this course. For more information about NNS' Education Assistance Program, visit nns.huntingtoningalls.com/educationassistance or contact Mindi Trantham (O44) at 688-8236.

A Unique Connection at The Apprentice School

Working in admissions at The Apprentice School, Judy Tyler (O22) comes across applicants with all types of names. But a couple of years ago, the name on one application caught her eye.

"This guy's name is Tyler Judy (E06). Can you believe that? I got kind of tickled," she said. "It was just so ironic because I meet very few Judy's, period. And I had never met anyone with the last name Judy. I had to meet him, and luckily he was a well-qualified candidate."

So Tyler Judy came in for an interview and met Judy Tyler, who later extended an offer. Once Tyler Judy got to Newport News Shipbuilding, the confusion started immediately.

"I was getting her mail all the time," he said. He even received emails from candidates inquiring about the status of their Apprentice School applications. "I was just like, 'That's way above me.'"

Now, more than two years after Tyler Judy first arrived at the school, the two still get each other's phone calls, mail and email.

"It never stops," said Judy Tyler, an Apprentice School alumna who has worked at NNS for 30 years.

People often stop Judy Tyler to let her know that her reverse namesake is doing well.

"It's been fun," she said, turning to Tyler Judy. "I don't know how fun it's been for you, but it's been fun for me. I'm proud to share this name with you."

In the future, the two could have even more in common than their names and being Apprentice School alumni.

"I can see myself working for The Apprentice School at some point in my career. Everyone here advocates for the apprentices and works so hard to help us get where we want to be," Tyler Judy said. "They can offer you anything you want in your career here. I definitely thank God every day for this awesome opportunity."

Judy Tyler said she has come "full circle" from being an apprentice to now hiring apprentices.

"It's a great place to be. I feel like if I had not experienced it, I wouldn't appreciate The Apprentice School as much as I do," she said. "When I see Tyler and the other apprentices doing well and getting into the advanced program, it makes my job worthwhile."

One-way vehicle traffic traveling north becomes a pedestrian walkway from 3:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. The only exit for North Yard will be inactive for vehicles during this span. There will be cones on the south end to prevent vehicle traffic.

North Yard Construction Enters Phase Five

The Joint Manufacturing Assembly Facility (JMAF) North Yard excavation project is moving into Phase Five this week. These two parking areas will be relocated behind the designated areas for bus and shuttle parking (see diagram) in the North Yard. Signage will be posted to alert drivers of this change. For questions, contact Paul King (O41) at 380-4605.
