Career Pathways Hosts Women's History Month Panel

Aspiring engineer Asia Shell, a senior at Newport News' Heritage High School, didn't know what to expect from a Women's History Month panel discussion with female leaders from Newport News Shipbuilding and Huntington Ingalls Industries.

"I was pleasantly surprised," she said. "Their answers were very detailed. They each had their own story. It was very inspiring because we all have to make our own way. It was great to hear how these women who are successful in science, technology, engineering and math (STEM) fields got where they are today."

Shell was among more than 200 young women from high schools in Newport News and Hampton who gathered at Heritage High School Tuesday, March 13, for the Career Pathways-sponsored panel discussion. It featured Alma Martinez Fallon, HII's director of Strategy and Business Development; Chandra McCulley-Hooker, director of Program Production for NNS' submarine program; Aylin Robertson, NNS' director of Production Planning and Scheduling; Brandi Smith, NNS' director of Quality Control; and Cindi Wolfe, NNS' director of Talent Acquisition.

Panelists covered a variety of topics, including the gender gap in STEM career fields and the importance of hard work, taking advantage of available resources, finding mentors and building positive relationships.

The U.S. Navy commissioned USS Colorado (SSN 788), the 15th Virginia-class submarine, Saturday, March 17, at Naval Submarine Base New London in Connecticut.

Colorado, the most modern and sophisticated attack submarine in the world, can operate in both littoral and deep ocean environments and presents combatant commanders with a broad and unique range of operational capabilities.

Like all Virginia-class submarines, Colorado was built at Newport News Shipbuilding and General Dynamics Electric Boat.

Shipbuilders Brave Nor'easter Conditions

Before a nor'easter brought tropical storm-force sustained winds and hurricane-force gusts to Newport News Shipbuilding March 2-3, shipbuilders across the yard worked to prepare for the coming storm.

"Whenever a storm like that is approaching, riggers throughout the yard prepare the waterfront and verify that all barges, ships and other waterfront assets are moored appropriately. They have to make sure everything is good and tight," said...

Updates: Hidens Parking Lot and Huntington Avenue Bridge

In January, Facilities announced plans to add 500 parking spaces to the Hidens Parking Lot by the end of the first quarter. Since the project began, spaces have incrementally become available for employee use.

Currently, 290 of the 500 spaces are available – with the remaining spaces on track to be complete by the end of March.

Additionally, a long-term plan for Hidens is being developed to add additional parking and improve traffic flow. Details about this plan will be shared with employees as soon as they are finalized.

In regards to the Huntington Avenue Bridge Replacement Project, the city of Newport News has not yet determined a start date. At this time, it's likely construction will not begin until April. Newport News

Shipbuilding will continue working closely with the city to get updates and once a project start date is determined, the date will be communicated to employees via Currents, the NNS to Go app and MyNNS.

For additional information about the Huntington Avenue Bridge Replacement Project, watch a highlights video or read the Jan. 29 edition of Currents.

Recharging with history and hip hop

By Jennifer Boykin

President, Newport News Shipbuilding

Over shutdown, I saw the Broadway musical “Hamilton,” about the life and times of American Founding Father Alexander Hamilton and the birth of our nation. Unlike traditional Broadway musicals, this one features both singing and rapping. Since seeing it, I’ve been quoting – and yes, quasi rapping – some of the songs. My favorite lyric is, “I Am Not Throwing Away My Shot!”

The past few months have been a bit of a whirlwind for me, and seeing this show helped me to take a break, and to let myself be inspired by something that on the surface has little to do with shipbuilding. If you are like me, though, it’s hard to totally disconnect from work and the responsibilities that comes with it.

As I watched “Hamilton” (which was incredible and I highly recommend), it helped me recharge and relax. It also resonated with me personally and professionally. It cleared my mind and got me thinking in a different way about my vision for our future and my responsibility as president. Like I said... it’s hard for me not to relate everything back to the shipyard, even a hip hop musical. In fact, I centered my recent Apprentice School commencement address around my experience.

“Hamilton” caused me to ask myself questions like, ‘What stories will future generations of shipbuilders tell about us? What legacy will we leave?’

But most of all, it left me inspired.

The work we do is critically important. We are all part of something greater than ourselves, and the Navy and our nation are counting on us. Equally important, we have the responsibility to listen to our minds and our bodies – to take care of ourselves – and to find a balance between life and work. If you feel like you’re getting burned out or lacking the inspiration or creativity you once seemed to have, get out of your surroundings and clear your mind. Whether it’s spending time with family, unplugging, exercising, binge watching Netflix, or going to see a musical – find what inspires you and make time to do it.

Remember, you only get one life. Don’t throw away your shot!

Tearing Down Barriers

Josue Ramirez admits he was initially apprehensive about coming to work at Newport News Shipbuilding. A contractor with MK Industries, Ramirez knew he would be far from family and friends in California.

“I wasn’t sure about coming because it was so far,” he said. Although he worked as a contractor at Ingalls Shipbuilding in the past, Ramirez was also a bit uneasy about the work he would be doing at NNS. “I had never worked on submarines. In Pascagoula, I worked on ships, but the dimensions and everything are different on submarines,” he said.

Kellye Walker, HII executive vice president and general counsel, also delivered remarks during the event, telling attendees that she initially planned to become a mechanical engineer. “When I got into my tough math and engineering classes, I didn’t see very many people who looked like me. I was scared. It was hard. I felt alone. I was totally intimidated,” she said. “Unfortunately, I allowed that fear and intimidation to change my mind, so I gave up engineering.”

Walker encouraged students to step outside of their comfort zones to achieve their goals. “You’ve got to push past those uncomfortable feelings,” she said. “Always do your best, and you’ll be amazed at how far you’ll go. And you’ll be amazed at the

On his first day at NNS, Ramirez met Pipefitter Domanick Fennell (X42), who helped make the transition easier. “We were just getting to know each other and having general conversation,” Fennell said. “He told me he was originally from Mexico. I knew some Spanish so I simply asked, ‘How do you say tighten in Spanish?’ After that, I started trying to speak more Spanish to him because I understood he was more comfortable speaking Spanish than English.”

Fennell, who has been at NNS for 16 years, learned some Spanish in high school and from people he’s worked with at the shipyard. After he met Ramirez, he started to learn more Spanish. “Just taking time to get to know him as a person gave me an opportunity to learn something, and it helped me communicate with him so we could work together.”

Construction Supervisor Rodney Huffman said he was taken aback when he saw how well Ramirez and Fennell were communicating in Spanish.

“After speaking with Mr. Ramirez and Mr. Fennell that morning and listening to how Fennell prefers Ramirez speak to him in Spanish so he can learn more, I truly recognized that we have something exceptional here,” Huffman said. “I have seen the positive impact, not only preventing possible miscommunication from a language barrier, but also the emotional impact it has on the mechanic level. When I hear, ‘Invest in your people and one another,’ I will always recall Mr. Ramirez and Mr. Fennell investing in each other.”

Ramirez said he is grateful for Fennell’s efforts to reach out. After eight months at NNS, Ramirez is feeling more settled.

Fennell, who is also a pastor, said communication is important as NNS continues to focus on inclusion and diversity. “You can’t be successful living together, working together and building together without being comfortable with each other,” he said. “If we’re going to work together, we have to aim to tear down barriers to let people know they’re accepted and celebrated.

“When I look at (Ramirez), I don’t see contractor, I don’t even see someone who speaks English as a second language,” Fennell said, adding the two have become friends.

During her remarks at the commissioning ceremony, NNS President Jennifer Boykin said Colorado “will forever be highlighted in our shipyard’s history” because it launched the digital shipbuilding transformation.

“In 2011, we started exploring going digital as an affordability idea. When we built the fan room on Colorado in 2013, for the first time we used digital instructions on a tablet instead of paper drawings – and we saw a 35 percent reduction in time and cost as a result,” she said. “It was our very first digital pilot, and for us, the project was a tipping point. Experiencing that reduction was the success we needed to move forward from pilot projects to the full digital transformation that we are in the midst of today.”

doors that will fling open.”

Heritage High School senior Adrianna Apelt – who plans to major in veterinary science and minor in engineering in college – said she appreciated the panel’s insight. “A lot of people in high school don’t understand what they want to do, and their ideas change a lot. It was nice to have some perspective on what the future holds for us, especially as women.”

A similar panel discussion held at NNS during Manufacturing Day last fall gave rise to the idea of having female leaders from the shipyard speak with local students. Career Pathways hopes to make this an annual event. Watch a video about Women's History Month at NNS on MyNNS.

...X36 General Foreman Karon Bazemore. X36 Supervisor Robert Hicks added, “We also go through the yard and tie down structures and loose material, depending on what kind of winds are expected.”

The nor'easter caused conditions many longtime shipbuilders said they had never seen, Master Shipbuilder Thomas Callicutt (X36) said.

During the height of the storm, the winds pushed waves over NNS' piers. The rough surf and high winds required additional attention as a safety precaution, and X36 quickly took action during the unfavorable weather conditions.

The tugboat Huntington was brought alongside a ship moored at Pier 6 to help smooth out the motion caused by the rough seas.

“We got there within five minutes. We were kind of like a floating fire truck trying to get there as fast as possible,” said Tugboat Operator Alex Rogers (X36).

Tugboats helped to hold the ship in place as a safety precaution for nearly 30 hours until the winds subsided. “It was teamwork at its best,” said Shipyard Pilot Capt. Allen Sutton (X36).

Women's History Month: Precious Brown

March is Women's History Month. The theme for this year's Inclusion and Diversity (I&D) monthly recognition campaign is "Unite Our Voices by Speaking Together." As part of the campaign, four employees will be featured during each recognition month – two from within the featured demographic and two outside of it. Employees will share personal stories, insight and perspectives on what the month means to them. Features will be published in Currents, the NNS to Go app, MyNNS and HII social media channels.

Precious Brown (X32) believes Women's History Month is a time to celebrate women of today and those in history who have broken down barriers and proven their worth to society.

“As a sheet metal apprentice, I like to think of myself as a woman who is positively contributing to Newport News Shipbuilding and the defense of our nation,” Brown says. “Though shipbuilding is a male-dominated industry, as a woman, I enjoy working in the field and getting the opportunity to show those around me what I'm capable of. Every day I walk through the gates, I have the chance to prove myself not only as a female shipbuilder, but a future leader in the company.”

During her time at NNS, Brown says many female role models have impacted her apprenticeship. “Company leaders – including Chandra McCulley-Hooker, Judy Tyler and Alicia Uzzle – have been encouraging voices in my journey,” she said. “These women have taught me so much about achieving dreams, staying positive and becoming the best person I can be.”

Brown says she too hopes to influence others, especially female youth. “Dr. Christina Spells, the founder of Empower Girlz Inc., encouraged me to get involved in this local organization dedicated to mentoring high school students. Through Empower Girlz Inc., I've been able to positively influence and encourage girls in the community to reach their dreams through hard work.”

As Brown reflects on her career, she says, “I am the compilation of many resilient women who have impacted my life over the years. From them, I've learned to be the definition of who I want to be, strive for greatness, and have passion in all that I do – you can't live your dream while asleep.”

Throughout the month of March, Brown encourages shipbuilders to thank the women in their life who have made an impact. “Telling those around you that you are appreciative for them – it will only make our world a better place.”

View Brown's poster on MyNNS. Employees interested in participating in this year's I&D campaign are encouraged to visit nns.huntingtoningalls.com/id-campaign-2018.

Hourly Performance Feedback Process Changes

Beginning March 26, and continuing through May 4, supervisors will meet individually with each of their hourly employees to hold formal discussions about 2017 performance. These discussions are part of the annual Hourly Performance Feedback Process.

This year, supervisors are required to provide and obtain additional feedback when they meet with each employee. In addition to providing feedback about safety, quality, work habits and technical knowledge, supervisors are expected to identify at least one area in which the employee excels and one area in which the employee can improve. Each supervisor will also solicit one actionable suggestion from their employee that they can do to help that employee be more successful in the future.

This additional feedback will be used to continue the conversation about Newport News Shipbuilding's future and support the NNSFORWARD Strategy.
