Partnership to Accelerate Adoption of Metal 3-D Printing

Newport News Shipbuilding has partnered with 3D Systems to develop additive manufacturing technologies expected to accelerate the adoption of metal 3-D printing in the naval shipbuilding industry.

The joint effort is expected to support future qualification and certification programs necessary to implement this advanced manufacturing technology for the U.S. Navy and further revolutionize how shipbuilders build the next generation of warships. It is also part of NNS' Integrated Digital Shipbuilding (iDS) transformation.

“This is a game-changing and disruptive technology for our industry,” said Charles Southall, vice president of Engineering and Design. “In addition to our ongoing digital shipbuilding efforts, 3-D printing could transform our design standards, and this technology has the potential to be one of the most significant manufacturing innovations in our industry since we began building nuclear-powered ships in the 1950s.”

As part of the joint development agreement, 3D Systems delivered and installed the ProX DMP 320 high-performance metal additive manufacturing system at NNS. The state-of-the-art machine is capable of making three-dimensional, marine-based, alloy parts for castings or other fabricated parts, such as valves, housings and brackets.

“3D Systems is pleased to play an integral role in transforming the naval shipbuilding...”

Keel-Laying Ceremony Held for Hyman G. Rickover (SSN 795)

The U.S. Navy held a keel-laying ceremony for the Virginia-class submarine Hyman G. Rickover (SSN 795) at General Dynamics Electric Boat Friday, May 11.

The initials of the submarine's sponsor, Darleen Greenert, were welded onto a steel plate that will be permanently affixed to the submarine. She is the wife of retired Chief of Naval Operations Adm. Jonathan Greenert.

This will be the second submarine to be named after Adm. Hyman G. Rickover to honor the pioneer of the nuclear navy. The Los Angeles-class submarine USS Hyman G. Rickover (SSN 709) served from 1984 to 2006.

Asian-Pacific American Heritage Month: John Witherspoon II

May is Asian-Pacific American Heritage Month. The theme for this year's Inclusion and Diversity (I&D) monthly recognition campaign is "Unite Our Voices by Speaking Together." As part of the campaign, four employees will be featured during each recognition month – two from within the featured demographic and two outside of it. Employees will share personal stories, insight and perspectives on what the month means to them. Features will be published in Currents, the NNS to Go app, MyNNS and HII social media channels.

"Each May, I reflect back on a friendship from my childhood that impacted my life in a big way – giving me a connection to Asian-Pacific American Heritage Month and ultimately shaping my views on the importance of inclusion and diversity as an adult."

At the time, John Witherspoon II was in seventh grade when a new student began attending classes at his school.

"The majority of my classmates were a mix of Caucasian and African American, but the new student was of Asian descent. We became friends and through our friendship, I gained insight into the Asian culture, witnessing firsthand the values the culture places on family, hard work and respect," he said. "My friend lived out these values each and every day – working hard on his studies and being kind and respectful to other students. However, fitting in did not come natural and not all classmates were respectful toward him the same."

One day Witherspoon's friend brought several firecrackers to school, then consequently everyone wanted to be his best friend. "I will never forget the look of joy on his face as he was the most popular kid in our class – for a brief moment he was accepted by others," Witherspoon said. "Shortly the teacher found out and he was expelled because of his actions."

As Witherspoon reflects on the situation today, he says that he can imagine how hard it must have been for his friend during that time. "He taught me the reason why it's so important to be kind and respectful to all people – our actions have a direct impact on the actions of others, so being friendly and engaging is now definitely a lifestyle habit for me. If we could lift up even one person's esteem while practicing inclusion; who's to say that one may lift five, and that five may lift 10, and so forth, which is the positive jolt this world desperately needs."

Witherspoon added, "Our friendship gave me an appreciation for the Asian culture and also made me realize how important inclusion and diversity is to our society. Everyone deserves to be included. By engaging with others and educating ourselves on different cultures, people take note of how diverse the world is – realizing that we're all more similar to each other than what meets the eye."

Shipbuilders Attend HII Diversity and Inclusion Conference

HII President and CEO Mike Petters encouraged attendees to “be disciples” for inclusion and diversity of all types in their workplaces. “The fact that you are not like me makes us better,” he said. “There is honor in where you come from, and there is honor in respecting where someone else comes from.”

The conference included a panel discussion with NNS President Jennifer Boykin, Ingalls President Brian Cuccias, Technical Solutions President Andy Green and HII Executive Vice President and Chief Legal Counsel Kelly Walker.

Attendees also visited the Center for Civil and Human Rights. The museum connects the American Civil Rights Movement to the Human Rights movements occurring around the world today.

Sharesse Davis (E19) attended the conference on behalf of SHIPs Network. “We’re making progress in terms of inclusion and diversity, but there’s always room for improvement,” she said. “I’m ready to be an agent of change.”

She was glad to see top company leaders engaging with employees during the conference. “It shows that they are serious about making changes,” Davis said.

Fernando Gaines (E63), the lead Inclusion and Diversity Champion for the Engineering and Design Division, said his group had already started down a path to create a more inclusive and diverse organization. “Our path was close to what was said here, but we’re going to make adjustments to steer our organization to meet the goals and objectives that were laid out during the conference,” he said.

NNS Offering Marine Skilled Trades Training Programs

Newport News Shipbuilding is partnering with the Virginia Ship Repair Association and local community colleges to offer course-to-hire Marine Skilled Trades Training programs for individuals interested in full-time trades careers at the shipyard.

Six programs are available for deck electricians, fitters, machinists, marine painters/coatings, pipefitters and welders. The hands-on courses are two or three weeks long, from 7 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and are offered at either Paul D. Camp, Tidewater or Thomas Nelson community colleges. The starting pay for individuals who successfully complete the training is more than $18 per hour.

“The pre-hire program is a core component of our talent pipeline helping Newport News Shipbuilding attract and onboard talented men and women to become future shipbuilders,” said Ray Bagley, vice president of Trades Operations. “The value of the program is that new hires become familiar with their craft before arrival in the company, which aides in reducing time to talent.”

Qualified candidates must be at least 18 years old, U.S. citizens and willing to work any shift. They must also successfully pass a background check, drug screen and physical. Candidates are required to pay a $250 tuition fee to the community college prior to starting the program but will be reimbursed by NNS after graduating.

Partnership to Accelerate Adoption of Metal 3-D Printing

...industry,” said Kevin McAlea, executive vice president and general manager, metals and healthcare, at 3D Systems. “The ProX DMP 320 printer system, combined with our team’s expertise in metal 3-D printing technology, will bring new digitally enhanced geometries to Newport News Shipbuilding, enabling higher performing warship components and ultimately more efficient, cost-effective parts delivery to the U.S. Navy.”

The partnership represents a significant step forward in the fabrication of components and material for future warships. Compared to traditional manufacturing methods that involve the conversion of raw materials into a finished product through subtractive processes, such as cutting or grinding metal, additive manufacturing involves the layer-by-layer fabrication of raw materials into a finished product.

“One of our goals is to provide leadership to our supplier base that will help accelerate the adoption of additive manufacturing within our industry, which may improve efficiencies and quality,” Southall said. “We look forward to working with key technology leaders, such as 3D Systems, to help to break down technology adoption barriers and advance additive manufacturing in our industry and supply chain.”

Post Shakedown Availability Milestone Completed for USS Washington (SSN 787)

Shipbuilders recently completed a major post shakedown availability milestone for USS Washington (SSN 787). Crews flooded the Floating Dry Dock and moved the submarine to Pier 6 for casting repairs and waterborne testing. The remaining work is expected to take a couple of months, according to Nicholas Mann (X82), a superintendent on the project.

“A team of six construction supervisors will coordinate with the Navy to make sure work is integrated with the Navy’s plan of the day,” Mann said. “I’m fortunate to have an excellent team around me.”

Barry Jones (X36), a dry dock operations

crane rigger, spends most days getting equipment to craftsmen and craftswomen and setting up other crane jobs; however, it was his first time taking the lead on a PSA. “The joy of it all is that it was new to me,” he said. “It was a learning experience and made me a better asset to the company.”

SSN 787 was built at NNS and General Dynamics Electric Boat, with construction beginning in September 2011. The submarine was delivered to the Navy in May 2017.

Keel-Laying Ceremony Held for Hyman G. Rickover (SSN 795)

Rickover served for 63 years on active duty service, making him the longest-serving member in the history of the U.S. armed forces. He led the efforts to develop what would become the USS Nautilus, the world’s first nuclear-powered submarine. Rickover also established and enforced strict safety standards, leading to the U.S. Navy’s safety record of more than 162,000,000 miles safely steamed on nuclear power.

Newport News Shipbuilding President Jennifer Boykin spoke during the ceremony. She discussed NNS’ special relationship with Rickover, who worked closely with shipbuilders in the early days of the nuclear navy and impressed the importance of quality and accountability.

“These are principles we live by, and commitments we continue still today. And these are the foundation upon which we are building this submarine – SSN 795,” Boykin said. “To the shipbuilders, you have set the bar high as the Navy’s model shipbuilding program. Keep up the great work and strong performance.”

The submarine, built at NNS and Electric Boat, began construction in 2015 and is on track to continue the Virginia-class program’s trend of delivering quality submarines within budget and ready for tasking by the fleet.
