Huntington Ingalls Industries' Technical Solutions division (HII-TSD) has a long and distinguished history of corporate citizenship. Our core values and culture remind us that it is important to operate our businesses in a way that protects the environment, serves the communities where we operate and enhances the investment of our shareholders.

HII-TSD practices sustainability because it makes good business sense. In particular, energy conservation and recycling initiatives have been driven by economics long before sustainability became a business objective. As a company we have learned to take the long view in terms of partnering with our communities and being good stewards of the environment. Our employees and our stockholders demand forward-thinking, green initiatives that foster social and environmental excellence.

HII-TSD has nearly 6,000 employees in 45 states, and 16 countries. Our environmental stewardship and sustainability efforts are well recognized. As a company, we are committed to waste and emissions reduction and to preserving and improving air and water quality in all of the communities in which we operate. We are also pleased that many of our employees volunteer their own time and energy to preserving our greatest natural resource—our environment—for future generations. We not only maintain sustainability programs in the communities in which we work and live, but provide expertise to our customers with regards to sustainability. HII operates and maintains several nuclear facilities on behalf of the Department of Energy, helping to clean up old waste sites while minimizing the impact of newly generated nuclear material. We also provide engineering and surveying services to the oil and gas industry to ensure that pipelines are designed and built to prevent releases and minimize the impact on local wildlife both on and off shore.

HII's corporate citizenship activities are well documented in the links below and support our commitment to create long-term, sustainable value for our employees, customers and shareholders.
